

Friday, December 18, 2009

THE BLOG OF COLUMBUS

Let's walk around other top stories from Thursday....

+ The Nash Finch Company announced it will open a new Columbus plant, and add 175 new jobs. The company services government commissaries, such as the ones at Fort Benning. This news surprised me - and made me wonder how soldiers are punished these days, if outside firms peel the potatoes.

+ Walden Books announced it will close the Peachtree Mall store in January, as part of a nationwide cut. Stocking financial management books simply isn't good enough - you have to read and apply them.

(Before you ask - no, that other chain of bookstores has NOT announced plans to change its name to Books-Two-Million.)

+ WLTZ showed a new design and logo for the Columbus Red Lobster restaurants. It's being premiered here, then will spread across the country. As long as they don't change the design of the cheese biscuits, customers probably won't care.